AMU prides itself on offering a platform for students to launch their careers in healthcare and allied health sciences.

Driven to deliver high standards

HEALTH is a growing field, especially in Malaysia and the region, which have a high demand for healthcare professionals.

However, in a competitive job market and an educational landscape filled with more choices than ever before, selecting the right institution for higher education is a crucial decision.

Asia Metropolitan University (AMU) offers courses from foundation to postgraduate levels. It was established in 2000 and has produced 25,380 graduates.

With a flagship campus in Cheras and branch campuses in Johor Bahru, Kuching and Kota Kinabalu, AMU’s educational experiences are accessible and dynamic, influenced by the townships that its campuses are located in.

AMU offers foundation studies and diploma programmes for post-secondary school leavers, as well as bachelor’s degree, masters and doctoral degree programmes in medical, health sciences, business and training programmes.

AMU prides itself on offering a platform for students to launch their careers in healthcare and allied health sciences. It aims to produce graduates who are not only knowledgeable in their fields but also possess the skills and attitudes to contribute to society.

Because of this, the university is a hub not only for local students seeking high-quality but affordable education, but also for international students looking to further their studies in a conducive academic environment.

AMU has state-of-the-art facilities. It is driven by the need to deliver the highest academic standards and ensure that it addresses the demands of healthcare and allied sciences professions domestically and internationally.

Above all, the university prioritises a learner-centric environment, where students’ needs are placed at the heart of its education philosophy.

Its commitment to high quality and continued excellence was recognised when AMU Cheras attained the ISO 9001:2008 certification in 2008.

AMU aspires to become the university of choice for healthcare and allied health sciences.
